RICHARD LEVY

MISSIONS

Richard Levy est professeur de neurologie à la Faculté de Santé de Sorbonne Université. Il dirige l'Institut de la Mémoire et de la Maladie d'Alzheimer (IM2A), l'Unité de Neurologie Comportementale (UNC) dans le département de neurologie de l'hôpital de la Pitié-Salpêtrière et le laboratoire FRONTLAB à l'Institut du Cerveau et de la Moelle Epinière (ICM) dont l'objectif est de mieux comprendre les bases cérébrales de comportements volontaires tels que la planification des actions, la créativité et la prise de décision. Il a été chercheur à l'Université de Yale et a dirigé le service de neurologie de l'Hôpital Saint-Antoine (Paris).
